

The Wisconsin no-call law is the best thing that has happened in our household for a long time. I wish it could be extended to include not for profit organizations and politicians as well. Telemarketing is extremely intrusive and a violation of our right to privacy in our own home. Someone should just open up the front door and walk right in and start asking me for my money. When I want or need something, I'll go out, find what I'm looking for and buy it...or not. The chances that I am going to buy something over the phone are zip, zero, and none anyway.
